Tebat Petai Tebing Tesarlup

Once upon a time, in the Haji Region, South Ogan Komering Ulu County, there was a very prosperous village. The village was very beautiful and surrounded by hills and rivers. All the villagers lived happily. Every year, they always harvest and abundance from their crop fields. This made the village very rich.

Every end of week, the villagers always held a very big party day and night in order to celebrate the village's plentiful harvest. This slowly made the villagers arrogant. They thought that they did not need other people since they had considerable wealth. They tend to look down other people who came to visit their village.

One day, an old man with shabby clothes came and approached the villagers who were having feast for the party.

“Excuse me,” said the old man. But no one gave a response to the existence of the old man.

“Excuse me,” said the old man again.

Then, a pretty young girl approached him.

“Hey, you, old man, what are you doing here?” She said angrily.

“Pardon me pretty girl, I am hungry, would you mind giving me some food to eat.” He said with a pleading look.

“Sorry to say old man, there’s no such a good food for you. So, please, get out of here!”

“But, I see a lot of food here.” The old poor man stared around and saw an abundant of delicious food and drinks.

“But, it’s only for wealthy people like us, not to poor people like you! Ha ha ha,” sneered the young woman accompanied by laughter from the other villagers.

“Please, just give me a little food, please help.” The old man begged for mercy.

“Ah, just leave, your presence is ruining our party. Go away!” expelled someone in the party.

The poor old man looked at all the villagers with teary eyes. He did not expect that the villagers in this prosperous village were really greedy.

“Hey villagers,” hailed the old man while pointing up his stick. “You’re so arrogant and greedy, God will not let this last long, God will punish you!” With tears streaming down, the old man spoke his oath.

For a moment, all the villagers stared at the old man. The silence followed the old man as he was leaving the party.

Up on the hill, the old man sat, day dreaming under a shady tree. A little girl came to him, carrying a basket of food. “What’s wrong with you, old man, you look sad,” said the little girl friendly.

“I’m very hungry, and the villagers down there don’t want to give me any food.” He replied sadly.

“Oh, well, I happen to bring a lot of food, please take it,” said the little girl while taking the food out of the basket.

The old man looked at the little girl in front of him with disbelief. He was really moved to see the kindness of the girl. Soon after, the old man gulped all the food served.

The old man was very grateful for the kindness of the little girl.

“Listen to me lovely girl,” he said. “All the villagers down there were very arrogant. I had seen their misdeed. They will pay for what they’ve done to me.” There was anger in every word spelled out by the old man.

“W-What are you going to do?” The little girl asked nervously.

“Let’s see kid!” The old man took seven stick from his pocket and stuck them into the ground.

“Go kid, go as far as you can, go to the highest hill in this village!” He warned.

After the little girl went away, the old man pulled out a stick stuck to the ground one by one. One, two, three, four, five, six and seven sticks were pulled.

Suddenly, miraculously, the flow of water was bursting out from the seven holes and flowing so swift.

“Look... proud villagers, look at the wrath of God on you, God will punish you!” The old man shouted loudly.

The sunny weather suddenly turned dark and wheeled. All the villagers panicked witnessing the horrible weather striking, and they get more frightened when flood struck their village only in seconds, drowning all parts of the village.

Now, people called the place as Tebat Petai Tebing Tesarlup, which means Petai river originated from the sinking hills.
