The script

My hometown is Makassar, the capital of South Sulawesi. It is one of the most attractive cities in Indonesia because it is right on the water's edge. We can see fantastic views and many picturesque islands from the city's Losari beach. We can also eat and enjoy the traditional food of Makassar, such as "Pisang Epe" while we watch the sun go down in a ball of flaming red and orange. It's a magical place to be in the cool of the evening with the fresh smell of the ocean air and the spicy aroma of delicious meals cooking in carts all around.

Pause

Makassar is a densely populated city. The population is only about one million but the area of the city is relatively small. For that reason, it is crowded and bustling with lots of cars, bemos, taxis, traders, markets, shops, shoppers, busy school children all frantically going about their business. If you close your eyes, I'm sure you can imagine the din of the horns, chattering ladies and all the other noises of the city life.

Pause

Regarding people, in Makassar there are many ethnic groups, such as Bugis, Makassar, Mandar, Toraja, Chinese, etc. This great mix makes Makassar a richly diverse and colourful society. And of course, there are many religions in Makassar too. In spite of what many people believe, the people of Makassar are friendly and kind. They socialize with each other easily and during special events like Idul Fitri, the Christians visit their Muslim brothers to bring them greetings.

Similarly, when Christmas comes, the Muslims also show their concern and affection for their Christian neighbours and friends.

Pause

Of course Makassar has its problems just like any city anywhere in the world. Nevertheless the people of Makassar are industrious and determined and these problems will be overcome.
