One of Four Remaining Yangtze Turtles Dies in China

One of the world's rarest turtles, a Yangtze giant softshell, has died in China, leaving just three remaining. Also known as Rafetus Swinhoei, the female turtle died in the Suzhou zoo in southern China.

Experts had tried to artificially inseminate the creature, which was over 90 years old, for a fifth time shortly before she died. The species is critically endangered due to hunting, overfishing, and the destruction of its habitat.

One male is left in the Chinese zoo while two other turtles live in the wild in Vietnam. The elusive nature of the turtle means it has been difficult to identify the latter's gender.

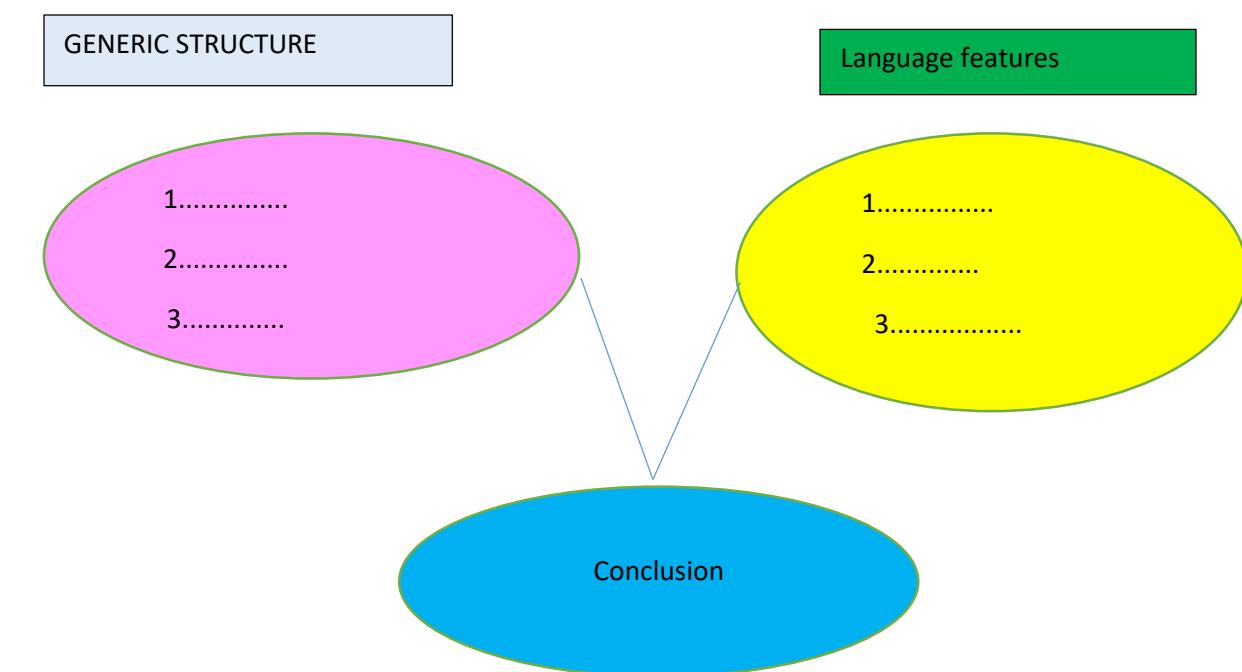

Local staff and international experts had attempted to artificially inseminate the female 24 hours before she died.

They said, "There were no complications from the operation and she had been in fine health after the procedure, but deteriorated the next day."

The cause of her death is being investigated and the turtle's ovarian tissue was collected for future research.

Seven Killed in Accident on Jalan Sultan

Seven people were killed in a collision between a bus, a car and a truck at 10:35 p.m. on Jalan Sultan last night.

The dead were all passengers in the car. Police believe the car may have been trying to overtake the bus when it was struck by a truck coming from the opposite direction. The driver of the car may not have been using his lights, as the truck driver said he did not see the car approaching.

The police said the car should not have been trying to pass the bus, since overtaking is not allowed on Jalan Sultan. In addition, the police reported that the car—a small Japanese car—should not have been carrying more than five people. The names of the victims are not yet known.
