1. Sangkuriang

In ancient times there was a king's daughter named Dayang Sumbi. The Princess has a child named Sangkuriang. One day, Sangkuriang was hunting. He was accompanied by Tumang, the palace's favorite dog. While hunting, Tumang refused to be ordered by Sangkuriang, so he was expelled. Knowing this, Dayang Sumbi was angry and accidentally hit Sangkuriang's head using a rice spoon. Sangkuriang was disappointed and wandered off.

Dayang Sumbi regretted her, then prayed that her son would be reared with her. The gods were touched by Dayang Sumbi's prayer, then gave him the gift of youth.

After years of wandering, Sangkuriang returned to his homeland. Arriving there, he met a beautiful girl, who was none other than Dayang Sumbi. He was fascinated, then proposed to Dayang Sumbi.

One day, Dayang Sumbi was shocked when she saw the wound on Sangkuriang's head. Apparently, Sangkuriang was his son. He was looking for a way to cancel his marriage. He also submitted conditions to Sangkuriang. He asked Sangkuriang to dam the Citarum River and make a large boat in one night as the dowry of marriage.

Sangkuriang was able, then asked for help from supernatural beings. In another place, Dayang Sumbi ordered several troops to roll out red silk cloth in the east of the kingdom. Sangkuriang thought it was morning. Exasperated, he kicked the large boat he was making. The canoe capsized and became Mount Tangkuban Perahu.

2. Momotaro

Momotaro is one of the most beloved folk tales in Japan as well as one of the most famous. The name "Momotaro" literally means "Peach (Peach) Taro," which is a name suffix often seen in Japan. You may have heard the story that translates to "Peach Boy".

According to the story in the period in this fairy tale (Edo period), Momotaro was born to earth from inside a giant peach that was found floating in a river by a grandmother who was washing clothes there. It is known that the grandmother had no children.

When the grandmother and her husband tried to open the peach to eat, to their surprise they found a child inside. The boy explained that he had been sent by heaven to be their son. With a happy feeling, the grandfather and grandmother then named him Momotarō. Momo means peach and tarō means the oldest son in the family.

Several years later, Momotarō left his parents to fight a group of oni (demon or giant) raiders on a distant island. On his way, Momotarō met and befriended a talking dog, monkey, and bird. They agreed to assist Momotarō on his mission.

Arriving at the island, Momotarō and his animal friends penetrate the oni fort and defeat them until they surrender. Later, Momotarō and his new friends returned home with the oni loot and took their leader captive. Since then, Momotarō has lived comfortably and happily with his family.

3. Robin Hood

According to legend, Robin Hood lived in the 13-14 century AD. It was a time when England was still ruled by King Richard and its provisional leader, King John. Robin Hood lives in the Sherwood Forest, one of the largest forests in Great Britain. There he lived with a group of criminals who hid from the pursuit of royal authorities. They were nicknamed "Merry Men".

Robin Hood is a brave man who leads the Merry Men group. It is said that members of the Merry Men have almost reached 100 people. They are transformed into community communities in the middle of the forest who are basically marginalized little people. Robin Hood often brings poor and homeless people to live side by side with his group.

In the Sherwood forest, the Merry Men often hunt the elite and rob wealthy travelers who pass through the forest. They wore green clothes, armed with bows and arrows; and sometimes they carried wooden spears and swords. Merry Men members know very well how to use the sword well.

Every time they act, the loot will be brought to Robin Hood, the man they consider to be king. Robin Hood then divides the booty fairly among each member of his group.

Robin Hood never let his men harm anyone except rich people who lived in big houses and didn't work at all. He was always kind to the poor, and often sent them a favor. It is for that reason that commoners view Robin Hood as a hero.

4. Price Andre

One day, a king was joking with his guards. The king joked about the big nosed witch.

The magician who heard the king's joke was offended. Finally, he cursed the king. "King, one day you will have a big nosed child," said the witch. The curse was proven.

Several months later, the queen gave birth to a baby. The baby has a large nose and is named Prince Andre. So that Prince Andre would not be embarrassed, the king asked his assistants for help.

The king asked his servants to teach his son that a big nose is a good nose. Conversely, a small nose is a nose that is not good.

When Prince Andre was an adult, the king arranged a marriage between his son and Princess Rosebud. Prince Andre and his entourage immediately went to Princess Rosebud's palace to propose to her.

During the trip, many people laughed when they saw Prince Andre's nose. Prince Andre was surprised.

"Why are they laughing at my nose?" asked Prince Andre. "They are jealous of your nose, sir. Because their noses are small and abnormal," answered the maid.

Finally, Prince Andre arrived at Princess Rosebud's palace. Arriving there, the king and all the royal officials laughed at Prince Andre's nose.

"Why are they laughing at me? Aren't their noses that aren't normal?" thought Prince Andre, confused.

Princess Rosebud came. The prince was about to kiss the princess's hand. However, the prince couldn't because his nose was blocked. Finally he realized, "It turns out that my nose is not normal," said the prince.

After saying that, the prince's nose suddenly shrank and returned to normal size. Apparently, the curse of the witch will disappear if Prince Andre wants to admit the weirdness of his nose.
